Dr. Hunter on Acute and Chronic Laryngitis.

LITEM NO. V.

TO THE REPROS OF THE SIRW YORK HER SID.

HIS.—I commenced this series of letters with the consideration of "catarrh," "sore throat," and "enlargement of the topsile and wula," because these affections are but the foreruners of more serious disease within the longs. Let us now pass from the throat into the landing.

the larynx is composed of several strong cartilages, ving as a framework to protect the delicate organs of its. Being furnished with vibrative chords, it forms a frect musical instrument, more or less unler the cond of the will. By the perfect action of these chords, a vocalist and the speaker are enabled to produce that inity of sound which conduces so much to our enjoynt, makes man intelligible to his fellows, and displays a goodness of the Divine Architect.

The extrance into the larynx is closed by a little valve, the rises up from the root of the tongue; this is the piglettis." On the approach of food or drink, this he sentinel shut down, and allows the nutriment to us on to the stomach. Below the vocal chords, which his is one of the most terrible of maladies. There are few, indeed, of those who have been its subjects bave not also been its victims. The Father of this ublic—Washington—the mighty genius, at whose ne every American bows with mingled feelings of rence and gratitude, fell a sacrifice to it. So, also, a many distinguished physicians.

By agris is inflammation of the micous membrane
he harny. It hacins as a simple sore throat or quin-

This is, by far, the most important form of the disease, slace it aprings from slight causes, and is a very common and most distressing malady. It always each im more or less injury to the voice, and, too frequently, in consumption. The symptoms are generally very mild in the ecommencement, and liable to mislead into the side that there is no danger. Sometimes a little pain is fell in the keypox, but more commonly only a tickling sensation, which prevokes coughing. Many persons complum of a sense of semething sticking there, and to get rid of it they are constantly rasping and elearing the windpips. Quantily we find a striking change in the breathing and in the voice. The breathing becomes loud and prelong of an the obstruction increaves, and when it has become considerable we have a peculiar stridulous sound. The voice is almost always changed—at first it is hoarse, and then gradually becomes more and more feeble, as the there gradually becomes more and more feeble, as the disease progresses, until it is accrealy audible. If ulceration of the vecal chords takes place we have a total loss of voice.

These symptoms are only present in the severer forms of chronic laryngitis. In the majority of cases only a feeling of obstruction is experienced, and the effort to clear this away occupies a considerable part of every conversation with a friend. One of the first effects produced in the mucous membrane by chronic laryngitis is a thickening. Its surface becomes hard, rough and irregular, which, extending to the vocal cuords, cestroys their freedom of action.

Chronic laryngitis very fraquently occurs from excessive use of the voice. This form of the disease is very common in clergymen, lawyers, and all public speakers. The vocal organs, by straining and over use, become exhausted and lose their tone. There are various phases of this disease; from the slight huskiness and in lure of voice, from which many clergymen paintuily suffer every flabbuth, to those destructive ulcerations of the cirtilague, marked by the total loss of voice, severe, and almost constant cough, and expecterations of froity mucous, mingled with pars. The most intimate counction exists between affections of the throat and those of the larynx. The reason is easily understood. Every breata you draw, passes directly from the infiamed throat into the larynx. They form but different parts of the same tabe, and are limed by a common membrane—one over which irritations spread rapidly. Again, the parts are in minediate contact, and the mucous secreted in the throat, becomes entangled about the enginetis and entrance into the larynx, and is often drawn in by one inspiration, and forced out by the mest expiration. Caronic laryngitis often occurs in advanced stages of consumption, from the irritation produced by the matter discharged by the lungs. Occurring as a consequence of tabercies, it is one of the most distressing complications, and adds doubly to the patient's distres should be reserved to early, and persevered to octaminedly.

The treatment I advise consists in the nic, two, or three or four times a day, of mild astringent inbalations from the inbaler described in my letter on catarrh; and, in such cases as prove most intractable, in the occasional nee of the showering syrings before dearnbel. These means sever fail to afford prompt relief, and when comblined with proper attention to the general health, emplayed with sufficient perseverance, will rarely disappoint the patient of a radical care.

In my next letter I shall consider the symptoms and treatment of chronic broschitis.

On the Frentment of Diseases of the Lauge and Threat, by the Inhalation of Cold Medicated Yapors, by Guironn D. Sawons, M. D., of the New-York Lucy Institute, No. 6 Bend street.

To the Editor of the New York Daily Herath;

Preposing to furnish for your columns from time to time a serus of articles, upon the treatment of Lung and Throat Diseases by Inhalation of Medicated Vapors, as preparatory to those which are to follow, I desire to call the attention of physicians, and also of the people, to the ungenerous and unkind opposition which my system of treatment has net with at their heads. If it were made publicly and openly, and not in the sick chamber, to the suffering and the dying, who, unfortunately, are confidently relying upon their counsel and advice, then the patient would be able to discern truth from falsehood. But "professional eliquette" forbids an open discussion—hence, like cowards, they only stab when they know the blow cannot be returned. I am aware of the many difficulties which attend scientific discoveries, and particularly the introduction of any new medical theory or system of practice conflicting with the usages of past ages. The unmanly assaults and institious sneers of scepticism find their opposition to truth (their only structh) in the inveteracy of that determined tenecity of ominion, which time and experience can alone over-

In future articles I shall endeavor to prove that the old system of treating diseases of the lunps and throat is founded upon a talse theory, and why it has mot with no success. But in this communication I propose to invoke public attention to the vile calumnies which physicians are daily circulating in regard to the system or practice of inhalation. They take unusual pains to warn their patients to avoid it, and while they know their treatment will never restore health to their victim, they prevent him from resorting to the only reasonable make his discoveries or views known turough a newspaper.

If an honest endcavor to lessen pain, siokness and suffering by pointing out their causes, and how they may be arrested, be quackery, then I admit the "soft impeachment," and glory in being denounced.

Whatever may be said of the want of success in curing lurg diseases by inhalation, there is one consolution in knowing it can prove no worse, or more fatal than that publicly denounce. It can do no more than kill—it can and does do less. Let us recall to life for a moment the remains of fifty thousand graves, last year made, where hie mouldering "wealth, worth and beauty"—with their scarred cheets, the work of binsters, setons, Croton oil, with their stomach silled to overflewing with the most sickening and diagnisting drugs. I present physicians to these "phantom forms" as monuments of their success.

class to these "phantom forms" as monuments of their success.

By applying remedies in the form of medicated vapor directly to the parts affected, and not into the atomach. I boldly and confidently assert to be the only rational and satisfactory method of treating diseases of the lungs and throat. My success, which I claim to be unparalleied, warrants the assertion. For the information of those who have confounded my system of inhalation, as used at the New York Lung institute, with that which has been used for hundreds of years, and is well known to the medical procession, by inhaling medicines from hot water, I take the liberty of saying that it is quite new and original—no hot water is used.

The remedies are in the form of volatile, chemical liquids, pleasant and agreeable, which are inhaled or breathed from a fine aponge, being of the usual temperature of the air, from a sponge placed in a glass globe, to which is attached an elastic tube and mouthpiece. Physicians are cordially invited to witness my plan of treatment, and its success. Patients who desire to be treated by inhalation can consult me daily at No. 6 Bond street. Peacens at a distance, who are unable to visit the city, by writing a full history of their case, can be treated by the same plan and remedies as here used.

"What is Consumption?" will be the subject of my next communication.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher's Opinion of Wolfe's Aromato Schiedam Schnapps:

[From the Independent, Nov. 11, 1852.]

And now, if our readers would like a sober word in the way of our honest opinion, we would say that we regard thisks about the most impudent attempt of a gin selfer, tricked up with a medical endorsoment, to get the patronage of that large class of orphan drinkers, made by the Maine Law, who desire to have all the beoefts of drinking, with all the respectability of temperance; and Mr. Wolfe is engaged in that interesting game long known under the very homely phrase of "whipping the devil around the stump."

THE TEX GOVERNORS' OPINION OF WOLFE'S SCHNAPPS.

[From the Tribune, Nov. 30, 1854.]

The Committee on Frisons (Gova. Duke and Dagro,) to whom was referred the propriety of using Wolfe's Schledam Aromatic Schnapps in our hospitals, respectively report that they have examined the article, and in their judgment it possesses no advantage over other brands of gin at much less cost; and therefore resommend that this Board do not endorse it over the pare Heiland gin. Adopted.

The Sunday Atlas says of Charles' London Cordial Gin:

"We have just wet our lips with it and find it perfect ambrosis—free from all intextenting qualities, of absolute purity and delicious flavor, and of great utility as a medicine in cases of dyspepala, gout, gravel, and discusse of the inteys. It is in great favor in all our first class hotels and best families, where it inspires the most genial humor, and excites the liveliest pleasure, at the same time being perfectly harmless in its effects."

The N. Y. National Democrat says:
"Charles' Cordial Gin comes under the category of 'good liquor,' and can be drank by those who hought under the nard flag without fear of fusion. It is also a medicine, and operates charmlegly on the bowels and kidneys. Our old Knickerbo kiers would recognize in this London Cordial something ahead of eves Schiedam. The genuine article is packed with the greatest case, and labelled "Charles" London Gin. Those who are troubled with indigestion, gout, or gravel, would do well to have in their bedrooms a supply of the toordial, to correct any indisposition, and thus perhaps escape a fit of illness—it is highly recommended by the faculty is those diseases."
